

HOW TO:
CREATE A RESILIENT
WORKING CULTURE – AND IMPROVE YOUR OWN RESILIENCE

CONTENTS

Build personal resilience at home & at work

Create resilient teams at work

Create a workplace
that drives resilience

QUIZ: How resilient are you?

Whether it's at home or in a professional capacity, situations arise that we can find difficult and challenging. We'd probably prefer they didn't happen at all, but unfortunately, certain things are an inevitable part of life. So why do some people seem to navigate these issues with relative ease, while others feel deeply affected?

The answer is resilience.

Resilience is our ability to 'bounce back' from a setback. It's a valuable characteristic in today's ever-changing world, and it's an asset that could help you and your team both in work and at home. It can have a positive impact on wellbeing, lowers stress, and can help drive better professional performance and productivity¹.

The 5 key elements of resilience are energy, future focus, inner drive, flexible thinking and strong relationships². To help you assess these qualities in both you and your team, we've put together a simple quiz and a handy guide with some tips on how you can identify, build and measure resilience.

BUILD PERSONAL RESILIENCE AT HOME & AT WORK

Resilience is not just about being able to bounce back from physical challenges, it's about having mental strength too.

One of the biggest issues we face in today's busy world is maintaining good health. From stress and depression to anxiety and panic attacks, there is a multitude of life events that can impact our mental health, and it's important to have the resilience to help overcome them.

On a professional level, mental health issues can hugely affect our ability to work and keep a business operating. When mental health challenges arise, it can be difficult to concentrate, harder to deal with time pressures, and interactions with others can become a struggle.

It's also worth noting that despite its growing popularity, remote working is also known to impact workers' mental health.³

Many remote employees have trouble switching off and struggle with feelings of isolation and loneliness – making them candidates for burnout.³ So, here's a few tips to improve your mental health and resilience...

TIP 1: BELIEVE IN YOURSELF

Create a list of your strengths and accomplishments, as research has demonstrated that your self-esteem plays an important role in coping with stress and recovering from difficult events.⁴

Try to write down at least one thing that you're proud of each day. This can be personal or professional, recent or historical. When you're feeling low, read through to remind yourself of the things you've achieved.

TIP 2: EMBRACE CHANGE

According to Harvard Business School, to get better at dealing with change you should remind yourself of what's important to you, try to separate your feelings, fears and frustrations from the problem at hand and look for practical advice on what to do next. When you start to feel stressed, ask yourself what your stress is trying to help you accomplish. Stress can be a good thing - if you choose to see it that way.⁵

TIP 3: BUILD RELATIONSHIPS

Find time each day to connect with a loved one, as strong ties to family, friends and co-workers can help you find the social and emotional support you need to bounce back from setbacks or disappointments.⁶ If it's not each day, try to check in at least once a week with someone you care about.

TIP 4: PRACTICE MINDFULNESS

When you don't manage your feelings, they can cloud your judgement. To overcome this, practices mindfulness as it allows you to develop the inner resources required to help you navigate through difficult, trying and stressful situations with more ease. Start with the one minute meditation. Find a quiet place and focus your attention on your breath. If your mind wanders (as it probably will), bring your concentration back to your breath.⁷

TIP 5: GET A GOOD NIGHT'S REST

Getting a good night's sleep can change the way you react to stress – and it's even been found to help with job performance.⁸ So, try to keep regular sleeping hours by unwinding before you go to bed, whether that's relaxation exercises, reading a book or avoiding electronic devices for an hour or so before you go to bed.⁹

CREATE RESILIENT TEAMS AT WORK

Just like personal resilience, team resilience is the capacity of a group of people to respond to change and disruption in a flexible and innovative manner.¹⁰ If you're unsure if your teams have the capability to overcome challenges, then bear in mind these factors, which may illustrate low resilience. Is your sick level high among employees? Are you noticing increased levels of conflict? What about future planning – are your employees proactive? Is morale and productivity low?¹¹ If you have noticed any of these indicators, then it may be time to start engaging with your team and working on improvements.

Team resilience is so essential to businesses that there's actually a methodology and approach that can help you improve your capabilities. The system is called 'the 7 C's of team resilience'¹⁰ and we've written up a simplified version for you to start using straight away...

CULTURE

Ensure your team has a shared identity, purpose and values to unite them as one.¹⁰

COMPETENCE

Make sure your team have the right skills to meet demands during periods of high stress with training and support.¹⁰

CONNECTIONS

Encourage your team members to get to know each other and build strong relationships.¹⁰

COMMITMENT

Align your team behind a shared mission and ensure that they demonstrate respect and loyalty to colleagues.¹⁰

COMMUNICATION

It's essential to keep all your employees up to date and encourage questioning, critical thinking, and dialogue.¹⁰

COORDINATION

Ensure your people and teams are synchronised and goals are well-aligned across the organisation.¹⁰

CONSIDERATION

Introduce widespread opportunities for employees to express their gratitude and appreciation for each other.¹⁰

A photograph of three office professionals in a meeting. A man in a light blue shirt and glasses is seated on the left, gesturing with his hands. A man in a dark vest and glasses is seated in the middle, smiling. A woman in a dark dress is standing on the right, looking towards the seated men. They are in a modern office with large windows in the background.

CREATE A WORKPLACE THAT DRIVES RESILIENCE

So far, we've discussed how to build your own personal resilience and how to nurture these characteristics in your workforce. But, how can you continue to remain resilient in this ever-changing world? The answer is with the right environment. Although the workspace may not play a direct role in improving resilience, it can have a significant impact on our happiness, as 95% of office workers consider the quality of their workspace to be important for their mental health.¹² With this in mind, here are a few techniques to create a working environment that will empower you to thrive...

SLO-WORKING

Given the propensity for today's workforce to burnout, working techniques are being developed which will become commonplace in future offices. One of these is the process of slo-working.¹² This is an approach which encourages employees to decelerate their working pace and take time to pause and socialise with colleagues. And if you're working from home, make sure you find time for virtual lunch times or coffee breaks with colleagues.

BIOPHILIC WORKSPACES

A recent report found that the introduction of natural elements in the workplace led to a decrease in employees' levels of mental fatigue.¹³ So, consider including vibrant colours, plant life, and materials like wood and stone in your workspace, and if you're trying to find the right room for your home office, opt for a space with lots of natural light.

VIRTUAL MEET-UPS

Although they may only enter your workspace infrequently, mobile workers need consideration too. Start by implementing regular conference calls and catch-ups to keep them 'in the loop'. Ensure you include them in planning meetings and discussions (especially creative tasks). And importantly, regularly reiterate how important it is for them to take breaks and use the slo-working techniques.

MAXIMISE MEANINGFUL MOMENTS

Resilience and your ability to bounce back is based on many factors including minimising the risk of burnout, and taking regular breaks. It involves building meaningful relationships and taking the time to unwind with colleagues.

At Nespresso[®] Professional, we understand the importance of these interactions, which is why we have spent so long creating the perfect cup of coffee. Whether you're having a difficult workplace conversation or looking to collaborate on a particular task, make everyone feel more at ease by coming together to enjoy a refreshing coffee moment.

To see how resilient you are,

TAKE OUR RESILIENCE QUIZ NOW

To get in touch with Nespresso[®] Professional, contact your sales representative, or call 0808 100 8844 or

VISIT OUR WEBSITE

¹ResearchGate | ²TheWellbeingProject | ³The Guardian | ⁴Verywell Mind | ⁵Harvard Business Review | ⁶Lifeworks | ⁷Medical News Today
⁸National Sleep Foundation | ⁹NHS | ¹⁰Payne Resilience Training & Consulting | ¹¹Payne Resilience Training & Consulting
¹²Nespresso Professional & The Future Laboratory, Workplace Futures, 2019 | ¹³K2space

